Cazoodle Shopping Search

Friends, shoppers no longer need to visit different websites to find the electronics they are interested in. Cazoodle Shopping Search is the first and only organic shopping search service that simultaneously provides comprehensive as well as precise product information.

The company was founded in 2006 and the first launch is for consumer electronic products including laptop and desktop computer, digital camera and camcorder, printer, television, MP3 player, etc. The company aims to integrate and organize information from many different web sources.

While many shopping search services exist already, Cazoodle Shopping Search provides far more results. For "canon sd1200" query, Cazoodle brings up 610 offers compared to 33 offers at Shopping.com. The results are accurately organized into groups of competing offers for the same product from different merchants. The sites to date that are out there offering price comparisons include Shopping.com, Price Grabber, Nextag, and Google Products. They mostly rely on vendor-submitted feeds and are limited in the information that they put out.

http://shopping.cazoodle.com has the ability to pull information from thousands of web sources. They can offer product review titles, reviews, image, price and much more from a laptop page on the retail websites. What an amazing site this is. It can make the consumer's time searching on the Internet much more efficient. Just in time for the holiday shopping season. For now happy shopping!
